

Business resilience, continuity ... and Comms

Sasha Fuller

Director of Communications &
Engagement at the East London NHS
Foundation Trust

Former Deputy Director of Communications at the House of Commons

Slido code:
#CrisisComms

What does business resilience and continuity have to do with us?

And ... why am I presenting on it at a Crisis Comms conference?

SLIDO: Describe the nature of your relationship with your Business Resilience/Business Continuity team?

Events, incidents – and what happens next

Don't just be part of the response - be in the room designing the response

It's all about relationships
(collaboration)

Influencing outcomes
(credibility)

The skills we offer
(capability)

What should you expect from your BC team?

BC policy and scope

Governance (most senior buy in is critical)

Business impact analysis, and risk assessment

Solution design (resuming business ops and mitigating unacceptable risks and single points of failure)

Design the response structure and plans (including crisis comms)

Process for returning to BAU

Validation (exercise programme, maintaining plans, AQ, post-incident reviews)

What next?

Relational gap analysis

Capability assessment

Speak their lingo: JESIP, Emergency preparedness resilience and response frameworks, BCI

Scenario planning: Don't wait for the big exercises. Tap into what your team is worried about now – it all adds up.

What I'm reading...

Alison Arnot

INTERNAL COMMUNICATION IN TIMES OF CRISIS

How to secure employee trust, support, and advocacy in crisis situations

